CAMPAIGN HUMOR.

Even a presidential campaign has some redeeming features and touches of humor. For instance, in the group that fought Roosevelt's policies in congress none was more conspicuous or deliberately offensive to the president than one Sherman, ally of Speaker Cannon, representative of the predatory rich of Wall street, defender of a stand-pat tariff policy and all-round opponent of anything that savored of reform.

Sherman was the nominee of those interests and politicians that howled for Taft and Roosevelt in the convention and cut the very gizzard out of the platform planks that were known to be desired of the president. They engineered the deal by which popular election of senators, physical valuation of railroad properties and all the other Roosevelt-La Follette heresies were dropped down the shaft. They cheered with glee when Roosevelt's injunction plank, the pet of his declining years in office, was smothered and a substitute adopted which demands precisely the law now in force. And they nominated Sherman as a sop to the eastern interests, which accepted Taft only because they thought they might get Roosevelt again if they beat the Ohio secretary.

Knowing the prologue of the play, it is amusing if not outright ludicrous to read in Mr. Sherman's speech that the real issue this year is, "Shall the administration of Roosevelt be approved by the people?" He says it seriously, too, and evidently thinks some folks will think he is in deadly earnest. Yet Mr. Sherman, with Speaker Cannon, Mr. Dalzell, Mr. Payne and a few other leaders in congress, helped to prevent action on any of the bills most desired and most earnestly recommended by the president at the last session.

Toward the close of the session the president's special message on the injunction law was received by these Republican leaders with such scant respect as to scandalize even the president's bitterest foes. Of courtesy, respect or deference to the president's wishes there was no trace on the contrary. It was openly declared and widely known that the Cannon regime in the house, which includes Sherman as a charter member, meant to do and did embarrass the president in every way possible, and did its little utmost to defeat his wishes at every step of the legislative game.

Remembering this, it is pathetic, touching to the verge of tears, to read that Mr. Sherman thinks the issue is, "Shall the administration of Roosevelt be approved by the people?"

If that really is the issue, no Republican, desiring to approve Roosevelt's administration, can afford to vote for Sherman.

RAILROAD MEN OUT OF WORK.
According to B. F. Yeakum, chairman of the executive committee of the Rock Island-Frisco lines, there are 400,000 railroad men out of employment in the United States at the present time. Four thousand more will be added to the number in a few days by the action of President McCrea of the Pennsylvania Central. Mr. Yeakum figures that the employees are losing $25,000,000 a month, or $1,000,000 for each working day, by reason of this enforced idleness.

This decrease in the payroll, he says, is approximately the same amount as the government's daily deficit at Washington, only the latter is shared by the entire population of the country, while the other $1,000,000 is borne by the railroad employees. The approach of winter is a serious matter for these men out of work, not only for themselves, but the families dependent upon them for food and shelter.

These idle men are now making inquiry as to how the bottom fell out of the full dinner pail, and speculating upon the prospects of obtaining employment. A promise to start the wheels revolving the morning after election will not do. They know better. The "prosperity" of the McKinley-Roosevelt regime is gone, and those who were left stranded when the bubble burst are looking for a rift in the clouds while they locate the blame for present cruel conditions.

It is to be hoped that the moving of the crops will furnish employment for thousands of these men, but unless construction work is resumed there is absolutely no hope for the majority of them. What will the harvest be?

MEXICO'S CONCESSION LAW.

The law regarding concessions passed by the Mexican congress in 1898, and extended for five years in December, 1903, expires by limitation on Dec. 14 of the present year. Under the terms of the act President Diaz has been able to attract the attention of capitalists and secure the investment of millions of dollars in enterprises in Mexico. Resources have been developed which would otherwise have remained dormant and unproductive.

The Mexican statesmen, realizing the imperative necessity of granting franchises and special privileges to prospective investors, gave the president of the country the power to grant concessions, but limited the time. The result has been satisfactory so far.

It is mainly over concessions that Venezuela has become involved in her present trouble, though we believe in the case of Holland the feelings of the Dutch have been wounded and no claims on the part of subjects are being pressed. In times past, not only Venezuela but other Latin-American republics have suffered from the rapacity of foreigners who obtained concessions by means of bribery and then attempted to run the countries to suit themselves. If an attempt was made at restraint, the home government would be called upon to make a show of force and the unfortunate natives compelled to acquiesce in their spoliation.

Under proper restrictions and limitations Mexico appears to have profited by the influx of foreign capital, but even Mexico was compelled to nationalize her railways to prevent their absorption by a combination.

"PROTECTING" AMERICAN ART.

The row over Mrs. Jack Gardner's objects of art, which were imported by another woman, reminds us that the United States alone of all civilized nations imposes a penalty on the importation of art treasures and calls it protection, although every American artist protests against the duty.

An American visiting the national gallery in London will see, among other great works of art, one of Raphael's Madonnas, "Loaned by J. Pierpont Morgan." Although it is one of the most magnificent works of one of the greatest of all artists, this painting is held in London instead of being brought to New York, because the duty on it would be prohibitive. Mr. Morgan intends it to go to the Metropolitan museum eventually, but he has a most natural aversion to paying "duty" on what is intended as a public benefaction. It is known that something over a million dollars' worth of paintings and rare art treasures are similarly held abroad waiting until congress sees fit to grant the petition of artists and art lovers for the removal of the duty on paintings and other works of art, particularly when they are meant to be given to public institutions.

Meanwhile, it is to be remembered that the chief opposition to the removal of the duty has come from Joseph Cannon, speaker of the house of representatives, and that he declares his present intention and future determination to fight against free art so long as he is in public life. No one thing could portray the man's character better than this stupid, unreasoning, pig-headed Philistine attitude toward the beautiful things of man's creation. Even as an offering to the deity of protection, which Cannon and his trusts worship, the duty on art is a farce, because it protects no one, it is fought by all artists, and it contributes nothing to the national revenue worth considering.

A gentleman who signs himself "Hon. James H. Brady, Republican Candidate for Governor of Idaho," writes the foreword for an article on Bannock county, Idaho, that appears in the Seattle Coast for August. As the Republican state convention has not been held, and won't be until Sept. 3, there is no Republican candidate for governor of Idaho. The modest Mr. Brady of Pocatello is a candidate for the nomination. In the article attributed to him is a kindly mention of the Oregon Short Line and a brief eulogy of the Mormon settlers of the county. Mr. Brady hasn't the nomination—not yet, though he will undoubtedly be the nominee.

Having picked Hughes for the Republicans of New York, and Taft for the party at large, the only thing for Roosevelt to do to make the disaster complete is to take the stump.

Judge Taft broke the legs of a horse while out riding recently. He will break the back of the Republican elephant Nov. 3.

SOCIETY

Miss Louise Spencer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Spencer, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. George W. Thatcher, Jr., of Logan.

Miss Libbie Wells is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Guy Thatcher, at Logan.

Dr. J. C. Hanchett and son Arnold, Dr. J. L. Hanchett of Sioux City, Iowa, and two sons, and Clarence Murphy returned yesterday from the Yellowstone park.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis B. McCormick were host and hostess at a dancing party at the Country club last evening for the Misses Severance of California, who are guests of Mrs. O. J. Salisbury.

Mrs. M. J. Frankland was hostess at a luncheon, followed by bridge, at her home yesterday for Mrs. Frank McFarland of Denver, who is the guest of Mrs. Fred A. Hale.

Mrs. T. Roy Brown entertained the Cup and Saucer club yesterday afternoon at her home on East South Temple.

Rev. and Mrs. P. A. Simpkin, who have been spending the summer in England, will sail for home next Wednesday. En route they will visit friends in New York and Chicago, arriving here in early September.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Blyth and daughter Edna, will sail from New York for England September 2. They are now visiting friends in Boston.

Mrs. Arthur Hubbard will be hostess at a luncheon at her home Monday afternoon in honor of Miss Helen Hubbard, who will be married in September.

Mrs. L. S. Wilson was hostess at a breakfast yesterday morning for Mrs. C. W. Ellsworth of St. Louis.

C. E. Stewart, a former employee of the Auerbachs in this city, and a brother of Miss Carrie Stewart of Cohn's, is in the city for a short time and stopping at the Wilson.

A pleasant lawn card party was given at the residence of Miss Rose Moeck in honor of Miss Marian Bean by her sewing class. Hearties were the decorations used and a profusion of red hearts were strung from tree to tree, and these with Japanese lanterns gave a very pleasing effect. Nine tables were used in playing the games. The first prize—a vase in jade and wicker work—was awarded to Mrs. W. H. Crozier. The guest's prize was a bon-boniere in ivory raised gold. During the evening music was furnished by the Hawaiian troubadours. About forty guests were present.

Next week Mrs. Frankland will entertain at two afternoon affairs. On Monday she will give a bridge party in honor of guests who are Salt Lake visitors: Mrs. Charles Runlan of Chicago, Mrs. Furschott of St. Louis, Mrs. McFarland of Denver and Miss Leon of Louisville, Ky.

Mrs. James L. Frankland entertained at a beautifully appointed luncheon yesterday in honor of Miss Trask of Denver, covers being laid for eight. The decorations were entirely in pink, the centerpiece being a large bunch of pink gladioli tied with pink ribbon, the candles shaded in pink, the cloth of Cluny lace over pink, and the place cards and all details being in the same color. The place cards were hand painted and had quotations from well-known authors. Bridge followed the luncheon, the prizes being pretty-bound booklets. Present besides the guest of honor were Miss Minette Baer, Miss Margaret Park, Miss Eudora Daly, Miss Lorene Leary, Miss Mary Moore and Mrs. Campbell.

Miss Nora Gleason has moved her studio to room 227, Constitution block. Classes resumed Aug. 20.

Saltair, Ladies' day, Mon., Aug. 24.

Eva E. Snow, china decorating, moved to 58 Hooper block.
